RESOLUTION NO. 21-08

Statement of Purpose Revised February 2021

The cities of Blue Springs, Grandview, Independence, Lee's Summit and Raytown, Missouri, are working with the Mid-America Regional Council (MARC) to explore and advance collaborative strategies aimed to benefit all five communities and the region by expanding local government innovation that enhances public service, benefits employees, and optimizes customer service.

Background

Today, cities face increasing pressures to deliver quality services that meet growing citizen expectations with limited, finite resources. They value the public they serve and place great importance upon their staff, striving to support the public and their teams using "best in class" technology and principles. Funding mechanisms that have traditionally supported municipal services delivery continue to decline, yet cities' challenges often transcend municipal boundaries. Common pain points include workforce and recruitment issues, public safety, infrastructure maintenance, and modernization of legacy systems and policies. Now more than ever, city leaders are focused upon good government. Out of necessity, they must look to ingenuity for imaginative, yet feasible solutions and must pursue strategic partnerships to fulfill fundamental needs and deliver best practices that drive innovation, employee excellence, and fiscal sustainability.

By sharing ideas and common systems, collaborative initiatives in the region have historically resulted in efficient solutions with positive impacts. Examples include the Regional 911 System, which has harnessed innovation and technology to benefit local communities and public safety.

In 2018, the cities of Blue Springs, Independence and Lee's Summit (all located in eastern Jackson County, Missouri, sharing common borders) established a shared services collaborative partnership for Eastern Jackson County to explore strategies and solutions aimed to improve excellence and innovation, for the benefit of employees, residents and visitors. The cities requested assistance from the Mid-America Regional Council (MARC) to facilitate discussion of potential initiatives and advancement steps. In the first two years, the partnership successfully completed several projects. The cities of Grandview and Raytown, Missouri, were invited to expand the partnership in late 2020.

Proposed Next Steps

With assistance from MARC, the five jurisdictions seek to continue to explore mutually beneficial shared services solutions, including but not limited to the following:

- Organize a second networking event to match employees with similar duties in peer organizations for a half-day to full-day job shadowing experience.

Shared Services Success (2018 – 2020):

- Supervisory Training
- Employee exit interviews (Blue Springs and Independence)
- Staff job shadowing and networking
- Cooperative purchase of an ethics, safety & fraud hotline for employees
- Sharing best practices in response to the COVID-19 pandemic
- Secured $748,000 federal grant for police mental health co-responders

RESOLUTION NO. 21-08

- Evaluate opportunities for joint purchasing or shared equipment for maintenance of city facilities and assets.
- Continue to work with the MARC Government Training Institute (GTI) to deliver joint supervisory trainings, and expand the program to include other common training needs such as governance trainings for volunteer boards and commissions.
- Provide leadership to advance the regional cybersecurity strategic framework, including completing the annual National Cyber Security Review self-assessment and exploring joint solutions to address deficiencies.
- Advance solutions, including cooperative agreements and shared services, that streamline business functions and help deliver robust, high-quality citizen services.

The governing bodies of the five cities will be briefed on this initiative at least annually and asked to offer their insights on opportunities for joint exploration.
