6. Roundtable

David Bushek, Chief Counsel of Economic Development & Planning, wanted to build on a comment made at last night's City Council meeting about the concept of identifying targeted redevelopment areas and identifying levels of incentive tools for those areas.

As the city updates the Strategic Plan and Comprehensive Plan, particular areas could be identified to encourage redevelopment by offering certain levels of incentives through tax abatements. The city would express its intent that if a developer brought a specified level of investment (based on predetermined parameters) then the city would be willing to provide a certain level of tax abatement. In other words, there would be a statement of intent, using a list of various criteria for the redevelopment area. This would also work for smaller geographic areas as well.

Instead of waiting for developers to approach the City, this concept would be a more proactive process and would include the Land Clearance Redevelopment Authority, Economic Development Council, Planning Commission, and the Community and Economic Development Committee.

There was agreement by the committee to pursue this process for review.

7. Adjournment

Chair Forte adjourned the meeting at 5:49 PM.
